- August 30 — RETIREMENT OF THE HONOURABLE ANTHONY MURRAY GLEESON, AC, from the office of Chief Justice of the High Court of Australia.
- September 1 — Appointment of THE HONOURABLE ROBERT SHENTON FRENCH, a Judge of the Federal Court of Australia, to the office of Chief Justice of the High Court of Australia.

RETIREMENT OF

CHIEF JUSTICE ANTHONY MURRAY GLEESON

On Friday, 29 August 2008, to mark the retirement of the Honourable ANTHONY MURRAY GLEESON AC from the office of Chief Justice of the High Court of Australia, farewell addresses were delivered before the High Court in Canberra by the Honourable R B MCCLELLAND, Attorney-General for the Commonwealth, Mr W R RAY QC, President of the Law Council of Australia, and Mr T F BATHURST QC, President of the Australian Bar Association.

In reply, CHIEF JUSTICE GLEESON said: ---

Mr Attorney, Mr Ray, Mr Bathurst, thank you for your generous remarks and your expressions of goodwill. I am grateful to everybody who has taken the trouble to attend this afternoon. Many of you have travelled a considerable distance to be here and the Court welcomes you all.

With us on the Bench are my distinguished predecessors, Sir Gerard Brennan; the former Governor-General and Justice of the Court, Sir William Deane, whose friendship I have enjoyed over the whole of my professional life; Sir Daryl Dawson; and my former colleague and opponent, the Honourable Ian Callinan. We are also joined by the Chief Justice of New Zealand and the other members of the Council of Chief Justices.

Justice Robert French, who will be sworn in as the next Chief Justice on Monday, is here. I congratulate him on his appointment and extend to him my warmest wishes for a happy and successful term of office.

I welcome the Minister for Home Affairs and the representative of the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps.

I am delighted by the presence of so many of my friends and colleagues. Above all, my wife, whose unfailing support has been so important to me, is here with all our children and grandchildren.

All the Justices of this Court receive strong support from its officers and staff in Canberra and in other Registries. The members of my personal staff have been of immense assistance to me and I express my warm appreciation to them. The gifted young men and women who have been my Associates have been a source of inspiration. I am especially glad, Mr Ray, that you have made particular mention of this matter.

The participation in these proceedings of the Presidents of the Law Council of Australia and the Australian Bar Association signifies the role of the legal profession in the work of the Australian judiciary. A strong legal profession, imbued with a spirit of independence, is vital to the work of the judicial branch of Government.

We administer justice upon an assumption that a fair outcome is most likely to be achieved by hearing strong arguments on both sides of the case. That assumption is sometimes contestable and it may break down entirely when parties to litigation are inadequately represented or, for some other reason, unable to put their cases to their best advantage.

I am afraid that institutionally the distance between the profession and the judiciary may be increasing. Courts no longer retain the direct control over legal education and admission to the profession that they had in former times. The mercantilisation of some aspects of professional practice has altered the context in which Bench and Bar relate. Even so, in this country, we have maintained a strong association between the profession and the judiciary and I hope that this will remain so.

The establishment of a national legal profession, through arrangements of reciprocity and uniform standards of admission and regulation, has been beneficial. Ultimately, however, legal practitioners are officers of the courts. The historical role of the courts in setting the standards for admission, and in professional regulation, reflected a defining aspect of the professional status of lawyers. The ethical obligations and the privileges of lawyers are directly linked to their participation in the administration of justice.

One of the most significant changes since I became Chief Justice of New South Wales in 1988 has been the development of Australian judicial institutions. The independence of the judiciary from the political branches of Government is essential to the legitimacy of the exercise of judicial power. I am convinced that the capacity of the judiciary to develop its own organisational resources is essential to its independence. Twenty years ago, those resources were limited. The Australian judiciary was highly decentralised, with little institutional expression except the courts themselves. Every two years there was a meeting of State Chief Justices that was also attended by the Chief Justice of the Federal Court. That gathering had no permanent secretariat and its meetings were chaired by the host of the occasion. It disclaimed any formal representative role.

The Australasian Institute of Judicial Administration, whose current president, Justice Virginia Bell, is here today, had only recently been formed. There were annual conferences at which topics of interest to judges were discussed, but beyond that judicial organisation was inchoate.

Now we have a council of Chief Justices of Australia and New Zealand, all of whose members are present today. It meets twice a year. It met here yesterday. It assumed its present form in 1993. Its permanent Chairman is the Chief Justice of Australia. Since 1998 it has a permanent secretary, who is the Chief Executive of the High Court. Its members, in addition to the Chief Justice of New Zealand, are the heads of jurisdiction of the superior courts of the Federation.

The Judicial Conference of Australia, a self-funded organisation of judges and magistrates, was established in 1993 with the object of maintaining a strong and independent judiciary. Its Chair, Justice Ruth McColl, is here today.

In 2002, a National Judicial College was established. Its formation was supported by the Council of Chief Justices and resulted from the recommendations of a working group set up by the Standing Committee of Attorneys-General. Its work is the formation and professional development of judges and magistrates.

There is now a strong sense of national identity at all levels of the judiciary. Unlike the United States counterparts, all Australian judges, State and federal, are appointed. They come from substantially the same professional backgrounds. Movement of judges between State or Territory and Federal Courts is not unusual. I came to this Court from a State Supreme Court. My successor comes from the Federal Court.

Proposals are being developed to formalise arrangements for judicial exchange, which in the past has occurred, but on an ad hoc basis. All Australian Governments now recognise the necessity of judicial education and continuing professional development. Inevitably, there has also been recognition of the importance of dealing with those issues on a national basis.

This sense of national identity, breaking down the earlier decentralisation, has both fostered, and been strengthened by, the development of the institutions I have mentioned. Since a primary object of that development has been to support and sustain judicial independence, it is self-evident that it should not be permitted to undermine that independence.

The bodies to which I have referred were not created for the bureaucratisation of the judiciary. Judicial independence is both institutional and personal. Ultimately, it is not merely an attribute of judicial authority, it is a constitutional imperative. The challenge is to foster the judiciary's organisational resources without sacrificing the qualities they are designed to protect and I am confident that this challenge will be met.

It has been a great privilege to serve as Chief Justice of this Court, and of Australia. It remains only for me to express my warm good wishes to my colleagues of this Court, and to my wider group of judicial colleagues, the judges and magistrates of all Australian courts.

SWEARING IN OF CHIEF JUSTICE FRENCH

On Monday, 1 September 2008, in the High Court at Canberra, in the presence of the Governor-General of the Commonwealth, His Excellency Major-General PHILIP MICHAEL JEFFERY AC, CVO, MC, the Honourable ROBERT SHENTON FRENCH made the affirmations of office of Chief Justice of the High Court of Australia. Addresses of congratulations were delivered by the Honourable R B MCCLELLAND, Attorney-General for the Commonwealth, Mr W R RAY QC, President of the Law Council of Australia, Mr T F BATHURST QC, President of the Australian Bar Association, and Mr C G COLVIN SC, President of the Council of the Western Australian Bar Association.

In reply, CHIEF JUSTICE FRENCH said:

Your Excellency, Mr Attorney, your Honours, ladies and gentlemen. The seat I have taken today is one of great honour. That honour owes nothing to my efforts. It comes from the place of the Court under the Constitution. It comes also from the labours of the eleven Chief Justices who have preceded me and the Judges, including those now present on the Bench, with whom they have worked.

The place of the High Court under the Constitution was explained in 1902 by the first Attorney-General of the Commonwealth, Alfred Deakin, giving the Second Reading Speech in support of the Judiciary Bill: The Constitution is to be the supreme law, but it is the High Court which is to determine how far and between what boundaries it is supreme. The Court was, he said, “the competent tribunal which is able to protect the Constitution and to oversee its agencies”. He called it “the keystone of the federal arch”.

In its very first judgment delivered on 11 November 1903, the first Chief Justice, Sir Samuel Griffith, with Justices Barton and O’Connor, spoke of the Court as “the embodiment of the judicial power inherent in every sovereign State ... an essential part of the structure of the Commonwealth”.

In announcing my appointment the Prime Minister described this office as “the most important constitutional office in the land”. Taken as a reference to the Court as a whole, it is entirely consistent with the vision of those who drew our Constitution and created this body. The honour that comes with a seat on this Court is therefore historical and institutional. With it comes a great sense of responsibility and for me that harsh modesty which follows from a realistic appraisal of my own capacities. Mr Attorney, Mr Ray, Mr Bathurst and Mr Colvin – you have done your best with your generous remarks to undermine that realistic appraisal. I thank you for them. You will not think me ungracious if I keep them in a proper perspective.

A proper perspective reminds all of us who occupy public office, be it parliamentary, executive or judicial, to see ourselves as other Australians see us. This will often be at best with a kind of sceptical respect. It requires us to examine and re-examine the way in which we do things and to look for ways of doing them better. The courts are human institutions. There is always room for improvement. In the twenty-two years I have been a judge, I can say the effort to improve has been relentless. It will continue across all Australian courts. In the end, however, the fundamentals of our system of justice require decision making that is lawful, fair and rational. It requires each case to be decided carefully according to its merits under the law. It requires it to be decided by an independent judge with the capacity and the determination to make a decision without fear or affection, favour or ill will. Those are the fundamentals which apply equally to this Court and to the busiest Magistrates Court.

The responsibility which I accept with this appointment is made lighter by the fact that I share it equally with the other Justices of the Court, each of whom has welcomed me warmly to their company.

It was a particular pleasure to have been sworn in by Justice Gummow. We were both appointed to the Federal Court within a day of each other in 1986. His Honour was appointed on 24 November, and I was appointed on 25 November. I could have been appointed on the same day but my commission would have been endorsed with his seniority. Much as I admired his Honour, even then, I preferred my commission not to be so encumbered. We were friends on the Federal Court and have continued that friendship since his appointment in 1995 to this Court. It is good to be working with him again.

There are many of you, family and friends, judicial, professional and academic colleagues, who have come from all parts of Australia to be present at this ceremony. I thank you and, on behalf of the Court, welcome you. May I particularly acknowledge the presence of the Minister for Foreign Affairs and the Attorney-Generals for Western Australia and the Australian Capital Territory. Among you also are representatives of the Ngunnawal people, who are the traditional people of this area. Recognition of their presence is no mere platitude. The history of Australia's indigenous people dwarfs, in its temporal sweep, the history that gave rise to the Constitution under which this Court was created. Our awareness and recognition of that history is becoming, if it has not already become, part of our national identity.

His Excellency, the Governor-General, has paid the Court the compliment of his attendance here today. It is, I understand, his last official function. It may be a matter of concern to some that for a few brief days before I swear in his Excellency's successor on Friday, there will be a West Australian Governor-General, reflecting both the legislative and executive power of the Commonwealth, and a West Australian as Chief Justice of the High Court. West Australians will have no such concern. I take the opportunity to acknowledge your Excellency's great service to the nation and, before that, to the State of Western Australia, and to wish you and your wife well in the years ahead.

I referred in opening to the eleven Chief Justices who preceded me. Three of them are on the Bench with us: Sir Anthony Mason, Sir Gerard Brennan and the Honourable Murray Gleeson. Each has made his own great and distinctive contribution to the work of the Court. I wish to express my particular thanks to Murray Gleeson for his wise counsel and the trouble he has taken to make me feel at ease and to ensure a smooth succession. His trouble has included the gift of a bottle of very good whisky, no doubt to tide me over the difficult moments. I wish to add my congratulations and good wishes to those which were offered to the former Chief Justice on Friday.

In addition to the former Chief Justices of the Court, the Honourable John Toohey and Michael McHugh, retired Judges of this Court, are present on the Bench. I thank them both for their attendance. John Toohey I have known since I was a schoolboy. He and his wife, Loma, were neighbours and friends of my parents in the 1950s. It is a matter of sadness that my parents are not alive to share this occasion. They gave much of themselves to the upbringing and success of their children and to the wider community. Along with my brothers and my sister, Rebecca, who are here today, John Toohey provides a link to that past. Our lives have intersected in other important ways through the Aboriginal Legal Service of Western Australia and later, when for an all too brief period, we were both resident judges of the Federal Court in Perth before his appointment to this Court.

It is a great pleasure to be joined on the Bench also by the Chief Justices of the Federal and Family Courts and of the States and Territories. They are all colleagues in what has become a national judiciary. We are also joined by the Chief Justice of New Zealand, Dame Sian Elias. I cannot refer to her as part of our national judiciary for New Zealand has seemed a little reluctant to join the Federation since its three delegates ceased attending the National Australasian Convention after its 1891 session. However, her wisdom and experience are greatly respected in meetings of the Australian Chief Justices and by myself, and I thank her for her past and ongoing contribution.

Each of us who comes to the Bench of this Court has come by a somewhat different career path. Mine has been dominated by twenty-two years as a member of the Federal Court, although I spent five years of that time as President of the National Native Title Tribunal. The decision to accept appointment to the Federal Court at the age of thirty-nine was more instinctive than rational. The offer came from Patrick Brazil, then secretary of the Attorney-General's Department, who is present today. Had I thought about it at any length, the logical arguments against the move would have been overwhelming. Sometimes, however, instinct is a good guide and it was in that case. The time on that Court as both trial and appellate judge has been full of interest, variety and challenge and the company of a great collegial body of judges. The Court has been fortunate to have had two Chief Justices of the highest quality in Sir Nigel Bowen and Chief Justice Michael Black. It has been a privilege working with each of them. I have every reason to believe that, but for my present appointment, I would have continued as a judge of that Court until mandatory retirement at age seventy.

Let me now move to conclusion by way of confession. I was taught by the Jesuits and one of them, Father Davern Day who became a family friend of long standing, has travelled to Canberra for this occasion. He has joined our family on occasions of joy and sorrow in weddings, baptisms and family funerals. Although I declare myself in all humility, and no doubt to his disappointment, an agnostic with a sense of wonder, the Catholic confessional tradition runs strongly in my blood. So before commencing my duties, I confess to diverse personal relationships over the years. They have included the first woman at the Independent Bar in Western Australia, a stipendiary magistrate, a District Court judge, a president of the Children's Court of Western Australia and, most recently, the Chairman of the Prisoners' Review Board. Unfortunately, the entertainment value of this confession is significantly qualified by the fact that they are all one person – Valerie, my wife and partner for the past thirty-two years and mother to the three fine young men who are our sons. Our marriage has taught me many of the best things I know. Her successive roles as magistrate and District Court judge have entirely eliminated any temptation I might have to speak of hierarchy in relations between the courts of this country. What is important are their functions. There is no place for judicial snobbery in a marriage or anywhere else for that matter.

The judicial task at all levels is relentless and carried on, as Jeremy Bentham observed, “in the face of the public”. We have paused, on Friday and today, to pass the baton. The judicial task continues. The time has now come to set about that task anew. Thank you on behalf of the whole Court for your attendance.
